still, owing to the proximity of marquette to the center of the iron district it must always remain the great supply depot.

plants started outdoors late in the season never get very big and never attract the least bit of attention when placed next to plants of similar or taller stature